News & Initiatives

Single use vapes ban to come into force across the UK on June 1

If any businesses have single use vapes left after June 1, it will be against the law to sell these to shoppers, and they must be disposed of safely.

Any business continuing to supply single use vapes after June 1 will risk the stock being seized. They may end up being prosecuted, which could result in an unlimited fine, a prison sentence, or both.

Ditch single-use vapes as ban deadline looms - GOV.UK.

Anyone who has concerns about the sale of vapes or tobacco products can report them to Trading Standards via the Citizens Advice Consumer Service helpline on 0808 223 1133.

The ban on single use vapes should help to reduce the number of 'hidden batteries' that end up incorrectly disposed of in bins, which can cause fires. 'Hidden batteries' must be disposed of properly at the nearest household waste recycling centre (HWRC) or in a special vape or battery bins which can be found in many shops.

Single-use vapes contain hidden batteries, which nationally caused hundreds of fires when vapes were thrown away in bins, mostly caused by lithium-ion batteries igniting when they were damaged or crushed.

Research has shown that many people are just unaware that batteries are inside everyday items like vapes, electric toothbrushes and power tools. If it has a wire or plug, battery or requires charging, it needs to be disposed of separately and all our HWRCs accept these items for recycling.
